JUDGE DOUGLASS'S

Iron-Clad Decision in Phelan's Case, by Which He Invades Every Private Right of the Citizen,

What Mr. Frederick Adams, Phelan's Lawyer, Thinks of it.

Such Injunctions are to be Granted No Man in the Community is Safe in Any of His Rights.

The injunction granted by Judge Doug-lass in the Aralanche case was a matter of considerable discussion yesterday about lawyers' offices, and the question was gen-erally asked if it was probable Mr. Phena would obey it. One or two gentlemen asserted, in the presence of the reporter, that he would pay no attention to it what-ever. With a view of learning what attude Mr. Phelan would assume, a repre-"The injunction does not apply to you, does it?" the reporter inquired of Mr. Fred Adams, Mr. Phelan's attorney. 'No. I suppose not," was the reply.

can hold?"

"Certainly not. Mr. Phelan is forbidden to avow his ownership of a half interest in the Avalanche to any person whatsoever. This means that he must not talk to his dearest friend about it. He is forbidden to employ a lawyer, or having employed one, he cannot assist him in the conduct of the suit. Liberty of speech is guaranteed to every American citizen and it is of this that my client is deprived. But it is hardly necessary to discuss the matter hardly necessary to discuss the matter seriously. It does not require a lawyer to discover the illegality of the injunction." "Does Mr. Phelan intend to abide by

"He has nothing more to say. He has already informed the public generally that he claims a half interest in the Aralanche and that he will not recognize receipts given by the present management. The attorneys for the other side may answer as much as they please but the fact remains that Mr. Phelan has given warning."

"Still you will dispute the injunction?"

"Certainly, as a matter of principle.

Next Friday I shall move to dismiss the
